Latin Wars Are Forecast

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 (AP) —The Rev. Blase Bonpane, 39, a U.S. priest attending the Hemispheric Conference to End the Vietnam War, said Wednesday the United States is creating several potential jungle wars by "exploiting" Latin American countries.

Father Bonpane, expelled from Guatemala last year for trying to stir up the peasant population, told a group of McGill University students these countries will erupt in revolutions bloodier than Vietnam.

In Guatemala, where 2 per cent of the people own all the land, the raw materials and profits "go north to the U.S. . . . instead of filtering down to the majority of the people," he said. "This is so in all Latin American countries where the common man lives in poverty."
